

Yes, Elvis Is Dead, but God Is in His Heaven: A Pastoral Response to Conspiracy Theories

by Todd Wilken

“God’s in His heaven – All’s right with the world!”

Robert Browning, Pippa’s Song

We never landed on the moon. The earth is flat. Airline contrails are spraying chemicals to pacify the citizenry, to control the weather, or to vaccinate people against their will. The Illuminati, the Jews, or the World Economic Forum (or all three) control all of the world’s governments and economies.

Conspiracy theories are popular. But are these theories compatible with Christianity? It turns out the reason conspiracy theories are so popular is precisely the reason they are incompatible with Christianity: At the root of these theories is a form of idolatry.

Sometimes, a conspiracy theory is merely a wrongheaded fantasy. Sometimes, it becomes a dangerous falsehood. There are conspiracy theories that don’t extend beyond the boardroom or the county line. Then, there are conspiracy theories that attempt to explain everything from the price of eggs to the outcomes of elections.

A conspiracy theory is an unfalsifiable worldview. Evidence for the theory proves the theory. Evidence against the theory proves that the truth is being suppressed. Lack of evidence proves a cover up. Nothing can prove the theory false because the theory itself is the sole arbiter of truth.

The framework for every conspiracy theory is a web of deception. Things are not as they appear. To quote TV character Jimmy James misquoting Oliver Stone, misquoting Winston Churchill, the truth is “a cipher wrapped in an enigma, smothered in secret sauce...” To find the truth you must read between the lines, parse events for hidden meaning, and reject the truth as it is presented. As a result, the theorist must be suspicious of everything and everyone in his life. Eventually, the theorist comes to believe that almost everything outside his direct control is orchestrated by powerful but unseen forces.

These forces are often described as having near complete control over the government, the media, business, the entertainment industry, and even the churches. These forces coordinate not only the big events on a global scale but also the events of a theorist’s daily life. Ironically, the conspiracy theorist is skeptical of the people and events in the world around them but never of the theory itself.

At first, the theorist believes that those who doubt his theory are merely naive or stupid. Later, he suspects that those who doubt are unwitting pawns in the conspiracy. Finally, he concludes that those who doubt are willing and active co-conspirators.

The theorist listens only to those who reinforce his ideas. He is convinced that he alone sees the big picture. He alone knows what's really happening. He is frustrated by those who cannot see what he sees. At the same time, the fact that no one else understands proves that he must be right. In the end, the theory isolates the theorist from everyone who doesn't hold his views. This is the result of believing a lie. The conspiracy theory becomes the final authority.

In effect, a conspiracy theory becomes the theorist’s god. The theory comforts him, explains reality, and provides meaning for his life. He trusts the theory above all things.

From theory to worldview and from worldview to religion is a move sadly common among conspiracy theorists.

Some hold to a conspiracy theory, but their overall worldview may remain otherwise unaffected. Think of the otherwise rational person who is convinced that Elvis Presley is still alive and elaborately faked his own death to escape the pressures of celebrity. Or think of the person who is convinced that the Apollo moon landings were hoaxes, and that the media and government have been covering up this truth for the last half century but otherwise goes about his life unperturbed by the implications of the conspiracy theory.

For others, the conspiracy theory has replaced a truth-based worldview. Think of the person who is convinced that ethnic Jews secretly control all the levers of power in the world, religious, social, political, and economic. For this theorist, there is nothing in the world or his life that remains untouched by the theory. The theory explains virtually everything.

For a few, the conspiracy theory becomes more than a theory and even more than an all-encompassing worldview. For these few, the theory becomes their religion. Those who question or reject their theory are not merely blind or stupid, they are evil. A questioning of their theory-become-religion is heresy. A rejection of their theory is religious apostasy.

At the root of every conspiracy theory is a form of idolatry—the attempt to find understanding, revelation, and ultimately, comfort in something other than the true God. This fact explains why some refuse to abandon a conspiracy theory. We don't want to part with our idols.

A Christian can avoid the idolatrous lure of conspiracy theories by remembering the following truths:

Remember, Christians are lovers of the truth. A Christian cherishes not only the truths of Scripture, but all truth. Most conspiracy theories are not good faith attempts to find the truth, rather, they are deliberate and elaborate attempts to deny the truth. For this reason alone Christians should avoid conspiracy theories.

Remember, God has not hidden the truth. Another appeal of a conspiracy theory is that it presents truth as something that is hidden. Scripture, on the contrary, presents truth as something that God has revealed. While God certainly hasn't revealed everything that is true, what God has revealed in both Scripture and in His Creation is not hidden.

For what can be known about God is plain to them, because God has shown it to them. For his invisible attributes, namely, his eternal power and divine nature, have been clearly perceived, ever since the creation of the world, in the things that have been made. (Romans 1:19-20)

God has not hidden himself from his Creation nor has he hidden the truth about the world around us. Does God reveal everything to us? No. But what he has revealed is sufficient for us to live before him by faith and before our neighbors in love. In God's economy of revelation, a Christian doesn't need to search the world around him for a secret key that unlocks true, hidden knowledge.

Remember, the Bible presents reality without resorting to conspiracy theories. The most dangerous conspiracy theories claim to have a Biblical basis. But nowhere in Scripture are Christians directed to understand world events or the events of their own lives by resorting to a conspiracy.

Remember, God ultimately controls the world and the affairs of men. Everything IS being controlled and orchestrated by a powerful, all-seeing entity: God. Men, organizations, or governments may exercise limited control, but God ultimately controls all things.

Remember, the arch of human history is bent toward God's purposes. God's purposes alone guide and channel the course of human events. No individual, ethnic group, corporation or government is able to thwart God's purpose in human history.

Remember, the mystery of God's hidden will is inscrutable. God has not revealed everything we want to know. As fallen creatures, our desire for knowledge and understanding outruns the supply lines of God's revelation. We want to know more than God has revealed. For this reason God has forbidden us to inquire into things he has hidden.

Remember, the key to understanding what is real, and why things are the way they are is Jesus Christ and His Word. God IS in His heaven, and all IS right with the world. We know this because the God who sits on the heavenly throne, ruling the universe from end to end is the man Jesus Christ:

Long ago, at many times and in many ways, God spoke to our fathers by the prophets, but in these last days he has spoken to us by his Son, whom he appointed the heir of all things, through whom also he created the world. He is the radiance of the glory of God and the exact imprint of his nature, and he upholds the universe by the word of his power. After making purification for sins, he sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high. (Hebrews 1:1-3)

From the right hand of the Father, Jesus rules. The Apostle Paul tells the Colossians, "In Him, all things hold together" (Colossians 3:17). All is right with the world because all that is wrong with the world has been atoned for with the blood of Jesus. This fact alone declares every conspiracy theory foolish and unnecessary.

Christians don't need conspiracy theories. As a Christian, should you be skeptical of what you see and hear around you? Yes! But rather than fill the void of uncertainty with the false certainty of a conspiracy theory, fill that void with the true certainty of God's Word.

Are dark, unseen forces attempting to control the world and conspiring against us? Yes! But God has already told us what those forces are:

We do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the cosmic powers over this present darkness, against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly places. (Ephesians 6:12)

God has also told us that as powerful as these demonic forces are, they do not control His world; He does. And, He has completely defeated these forces in the death and resurrection of Jesus.

Is it often hard to believe that God is in His heaven and all is right with the world, that human history is unfolding according to God's good and gracious purpose? Yes! Is it often easier to believe that someone or something else is in control? Yes! But in those moments of doubt, you are invited and commanded to flee to God and His Word, not a conspiracy theory, for answers. The great Psalm of the Reformation is worth quoting in its entirety here. Read it carefully and note how it speaks directly to the circumstances that give rise to so many conspiracy theories:

God is our refuge and strength,
a very present help in trouble.
Therefore we will not fear,
even though the earth be removed,
and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea;
though its waters roar and be troubled,
though the mountains shake with its swelling.

There is a river whose streams shall make glad the city of God,
the holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High.
God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved;
God shall help her, just at the break of dawn.
The nations raged, the kingdoms were moved;
He uttered His voice, the earth melted.

The Lord of hosts is with us;
the God of Jacob is our refuge.

Come, behold the works of the Lord,
Who has made desolations in the earth.
He makes wars cease to the end of the earth;
He breaks the bow and cuts the spear in two;
He burns the chariot in the fire.

Be still, and know that I am God;
I will be exalted among the nations,
I will be exalted in the earth!

The Lord of hosts is with us;
the God of Jacob is our refuge. (Psalm 46)

The true God and his purpose for mankind is a better explanation for what is happening in the world and your life than the sinister forces at the heart of conspiracy theories. The true God is also a better God than the idol of a conspiracy theory. Like every idol, the comfort offered by a conspiracy theory is both false and fleeting. The comfort that God gives in Jesus Christ is true and eternal.
